

Destination Banner

Below are the "Destination Banner" graphic examples that would be placed on any page in any web site that when clicked on would take the user to the Vacation Planner Preferences page for the destination of the banner.

The Destination Banner contains all the information in a link. Contained in the link are the domain name, source id, package id.

Destination Date Banner

Below are the "Destination Date Banner" examples that would be placed on any page in any web site that when clicked on would take the user to the Vacation Planner Preferences page.

The Destination Date Banner uses a form submit that posts data to the VPS preference page. Contained in the form data are the domain name, source id, package id, month, day, year, number of nights.

The figure displays two examples of the Destination Date Banner. Each banner is a horizontal rectangular box with a textured background. The first banner, titled "Visit Colorado!", contains the text "Start Date" followed by a dropdown menu showing "April", a date input field showing "14", and another dropdown menu. To the right of these is the text "#Nights" followed by an input field showing "5", and a "Go" button. The second banner, titled "Visit Puerto Vallarta!", contains identical form elements: "Start Date", a date dropdown (April), a date input (14), a date dropdown, "#Nights", an input field (5), and a "Go" button.

Destination Detail Banner

Above is the "Destination Detail Banner" example that would be placed on any page in any web site that when clicked on would take the user to the Vacation Planner Preferences page.

The Destination Detail Banner uses a form submit that posts data to the VPS preference page. Contained in the form data are the domain name, source id, package id, month, day, year, number of nights, component list and number of people in their respective their age groups.
